“ This evening my husband and I found out about Cindy's Homecoming to the Lord. Glenn had the privilege of knowing Cindy through the marriage of his brother to her sister Peggy, thus, allowing him to grow up close to the Siegle family. Our thoughts are with all the members of this lovely family, and we pray for their hearts to be comforted by the Holy Spirit.

“ Hello Rebecca,
I am so sorry for the loss of your sister.
I just received an e-mail from Jo-Anne so this was the only way I could tell you how sorry I am.
God be with you and your family in your time of loss and sorrow.

“ Words will never fully capture how great of a person my sister Cindy was, just as words can not begin to do justice for the great loss that we all are feeling. She was a beautiful life, that is lost to all of us! We cry for our loss, but we should rejoice in knowing that she is now pain free and in a much better place.

Cindy, more than any other person in my life, taught me the meaning of courage. As a child and teenager, she always courageously defended her younger siblings and stood firm for what she believed in, regardless of the size, age, number or resolution of those that opposed her. As an adult, she stood with the same courage and tenacity against the toughest that life had to throw at her, and she did it all with the highest degree of dignity. Her favorite animal was always the owl, and she certainly was wise enough to have that as a fair representation of her, but to me, she was always a lion... confident, proud, and standing courageously against all odds.

Godspeed my lion, may you rest in peace, and I will see you on the other side!

“ Cindy was such a great big sister. I'll always treasure the many times she stood up for me when we were little and all the times we have shared. I'm thankful for our trip to Hawaii the other year and our recent trip to Atlanta. I only wish we could have gone to Italy as I knew she really wanted to go there. I don't know what heaven is really like but in my mind, God lets you see any part of the universe you want to see. So I'm confident that Cindy has finally seen Italy. May she rest in peace.
